A comprehensive new resource that advances genealogy research

GenealogyBank.com provides Web-based access to millions of the United States' core genealogical records from the 1600s to the present day. Through basic name search and advanced search options, genealogists can easily find and browse digital images of American historical genealogies, obituaries, marriage notices, birth announcements, casualty lists, military and government documents and other essential primary sources. It also provides the full text of modern U.S. newspaper obituaries and enhanced Social Security Death Index (SSDI) records. Significantly, each of GenealogyBank.com's five historical or modern collections is updated with new content on a daily, weekly or monthly basis.

Articles, obituaries and more from Historical Newspapers

By searching more than 500,000 complete issues of over 1,300 historical U.S. newspapers, researchers can quickly find names and keywords in millions of articles, obituaries, marriage notices, birth announcements and other items. Digitized in cooperation with the American Antiquarian Society and other institutions, this exclusive collection includes titles published between 1690 and 1977.

America's Obituaries and the Social Security Death Index

GenealogyBank.com offers the full text of more than 22 million obituaries and death notices published between 1977 and the present day in over 800 newspapers from all 50 states. Genealogists can cross-reference these obituaries with over 78 million Social Security Death Index (SSDI) records, which have been enhanced with exact age and city, county and state information that genealogists can easily copy and save to their files.

Digital facsimiles of printed items from Historical Books

The Historical Books collection includes digitized versions of books, pamphlets and other publications printed in America from 1801 expanding to 1900. This makes it easy to search rare, fragile genealogies, local histories, cards, charts and other printed items online.

A variety of essential records from Historical Documents

The Historical Documents collection features the entire American State Papers (1789-1838) and all items of genealogical value—over 40% of the publications—from the U.S. Congressional Serial Set (1817-1980). Genealogists can research government and military records, casualty lists, widows' claims, military pension requests, bounty land warrant actions, dispute resolutions, land grant applications, orphans' petitions and much more.
